London, Apr. 12.—Troops may be called out to unload 50 ships in the Port of London, idle through a strike which today involved more than 13,000 dockers. Urgent moves to safeguard the nation's food supplies are expected to follow a Cabinet meeting tomorrow. Official efforts are expected to avoid the delay in handling food supplies which occurred in last year's London dock strike. Then, there was initial hesitation before troops were drafted for unloading essential supplies.

An early statement in Parliament is likely on the strike, which began yesterday when 7,000 men stopped work in protest against the dismissal of 33 men, mostly stated to be too old for the work or in failing health.

Nanking, Apr. 13.—China's Communists yesterday increased their pressure on the government --- already sweating over a Red ultimatum—by landing on a Yangtse island 70 miles Southwest of Nanking.

Semi-official Chinese quarters said the Reds extended the deadline for a reply from Tuesday to Friday. The general feeling in Nanking is that the Communists are now ready to cross the Yangise in overwhelming force, and will not wait too long.

This broad river, the dividing line between the Communist North and the Government He states he will decide after South, is unlikely to prove much of a military barrier to the veteran Red columns.

remarkable must have occurred to cause such a voting swing, especially in London where, for 15 years, the Socialists have held control of the metropolitan and local councils: and that remarkable influence must surely have been the new super-nusterity Budget which binds the country for another 12 months to heavy taxation, high cost of living, and the bare necessities of life. But there may be a secondary contributing factor-Labour's over-confidence in its party appeal and with it a slackening off in organisation. Labour has always attached exceptional importance to its showings in local elections—it was through them that the Party first made its presence felt, in the political field. Through the control of County, Borough, Urban and Rural councils it has been able, unobtrusively, to introduce local legislation and administration following a Socialist pattern, and any serious loss of this control, such has now occurred, must of necessity come as a severe shock to the Party. But the outcome of the county council elections cannot, with complete confidence, be taken as an assurance for similar Tory successes in the next General Election. There is still more than a year to run before these are held and the national situation may, by that time, present an entirely different picture than it does today; moreover the issues then will be more profound, with purely local interests giving way to wider influences. Nevertheless the Socialists have suffered a disastrous defeat at the polls which, if repeated at the November Borough and Urban elections, must cause them to be extremely nervous about the outcome of the 1950 General Election.

London, Apr. 12. — The settlement of a libel action brought by Sir John Shaw, Governor and Commanderin-Chief of Trinidad, and formerly Chief Secretary in Palestine, arising out of passages in the book "The Rape of Palestine," was announced in the High Court

The defendants were the St Botolph Publishing Company, of London, the publishers of the book in Britain. Mr II. L. Parker, for Sir John, said that the American author, had been notified, of the proceedings, which arose out of the pussages in the book dealing with the bombing of the King David Hotel, Jerusalem, on July 22,

The inference was that Sir John was responsible for the death of the 60 persons killed In the explosion and that he was a coward , who had saved his own life at the expense of many of his colleagues, subordinates and friends.

HELPED IN RESCUE

The true position was the exact reverse of that. Mr Parker said that Shaw received no warning from anyone and did not direct anyone to remain in the building. The statement that he forbade people to leave, though he himself got out, was "untrue."

Mr Parker said Sir John went through dust and fumes, and crawled along a narrow ledge over piles of shattered masonry to bring others out of the wreckage. Many of the 60 killed were his close friends.

Mr Parker said that as soon as the defendants had had an opportunity of investigating the facts they found that the passages in the book were untrue and unreservedly withdrew them. They had withdrawn the book from circulation and had underlaken to black-out the defending passages before reissuing it.

They recognised that Sir John was entitled to substantial. damages for an admittedly outrageous libel, but the plaintiff did not desire to make money out of the proceedings. He brought his action primarily to clear his name and to show that the high tradition of the Colonial Service had been The General Committee maintained in the King David

The details of the settlement were not announced.-Reuter.

A Lesson For British Boxers

By RONALD BOXALL

Let there be no mistake-when Dick Turpin, the British and Empire Middleweight Champion, left the Earl's Court ring after being knocked out by World Middleweight Champion Marcel Cerdan, he was more popular with the fans than he had ever been. This reflects great credit on a man who had just been pole-axed with one of the most devastating left hooks ever witnessed in any ring.

The end came after one minute twenty-two seconds of the seventh round. Turpin, who had been boxing magnificently, retreated before a vicious attack. Cerdan saw the chance he had been waiting for, and acted with lightning speed. He unleashed a left hook which travelled only a few inches and landed squarely on Turpin's jaw. The British champion went down as if he had been pole-axed and lay motionless on the canvas while referee Moss Deyong counted him out.

But there was far more in the fight than that one punch. Cerdan was an odds on favourite and boxing critics almost unanimously prophesied that Turpin would be lucky if he was still on his feet after the half-way mark.

Not unnaturally, therefore, the capacity crowd at Earl's Court saw no hope of a British victory. In fact, the only issue in doubt was how long Turpin could postpone the inevitable outcome.

HOW NEW RULES ARE IMPROVING SOCCER

By CHARLES BUCHAN

Now that the English football season is in its final stages, it is possible to judge some of the effects of the new laws introduced last summer by the English Football Association. They're three in number, but only one of them, that relating to charging, has had any material effect. I will deal with the other two briefly.

The first new law makes it essential that all players should stand outside the penalty area when a goal kick is being taken. That was necessary. anyway, as the ball from a goal kick is not in play until it has passed beyond the penalty area. This point was only brought in to clear up an anomaly in the law.

The second new law forbids an opponent from attempting to kick the ball when it is in the goalkeeper's possession. I am glad to say this has put an end to some unseemly goal-mouth incidents, but has not affected the course of a game at all.

But the change relating to charging certainly has affected the game. The new law reads: A player shall be penalised if he charges fairly, that is with the shoulder, when the ball is not within playing distance of the players concerned and they are definitely not attempting to play it. In other words, charging is not allowed unless the players are about to play the ball. This change was brought in to stop defenders interfering with forwards who were trying to get the ball, either as it approached the goal or the goal-line. And it has succeeded to a certain extent.

goal-line. He must, for safety's sake, play the ball, and this ensures fewer stoppages and less friction between players. Nor can a defender protect his goalkeeper by charging an onrushing forward. The result has been that goal-Reepers nowadays rarely delay their clearances in case they are bustled by an oncoming forward. And that has brought the biggest improvement so far.

' In our League games today, goalkeepers are no longer quickly to an unmarked colleague, either a half-back or wing-forward. They are starting attacks from their own t goal-mouth with a judicious throw, or lob.

BEFORE the war, many cities provided bridge as a recreational feature for such groups as the Parent-Teachers Association. I recall that Cleveland, O., hired bridge instructors to give lessons in the various schoolhouses evenings. It is interesting to note that Brooklyn College, Brooklyn, N.Y., now has bridge courses in its Adult Education Division. CONVICTED AGAINST HUMANITY

Judgment Passed Ex-Nazi Officials

Nuremberg, Apr. 12.—The American War Crimes Court, passing judgment on 21 of Hitler's top diplomats and officials, today found two of them guilty of abetting Nazi atrocities in which 6,000,000 European Jews

The two, Gustav Steengracht Van Mtyland, former "bright young man" of the German Foreign Office, and Gottlos Berger, chief of S.S. headquarters, were among seven of the Nazis convicted today of crimes against humanity.

The Tribunal, in the second day of the reading of its 832-page judgment for the thirteenth and last of the Nuremberg trials, drew attention to the "inhuman activities" of the Dirleuanger extermination brigade, which Berger had admitted regarding as "my special

The Budget London, Apr. 12-The Labour Government tonight easily won preliminary approval of its austerity budget for 1949 in House of Commons when the Communists forced a vote and the Conservative Party abstained to a man. The vote, taken on a motion to send the budget to a committee for study, was 302 for and three against, but it was by no means a fair test of the overwhelming opposition by apparently because division was forced by the only two Communist members in the House of Commons, William Gallacher and Philip Piratin. The other man who voted with them against the budget was John Platt-Mills, former Labour Party member who has gong over to side with the Communists on almost every issue.

SOCIALISTS ABSTAIN

About a dozen Labour members also abstained on the vote, indicating that opposition within the Party to the budget had not yet died down. The budget now will be taken up in the Ways and Means Committee, then returned to the floor of the House as a finance bill for another vote.

On that occasion, the Conservatives are expected to register their real opposition to what they have called the "joy through misery" budget,

The vote tonight caught both sides by surprise, Both Labour and the Conservatives had sent out whips for tomorrow night, when they expected a showdown on the budget. However, the Communists forced the issue suddenly.—United Press.
